| 39              | That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan   |
|                 | Under my battlements. Come, you spirits  |
| 40              | That tend on mortal thoughts, unsex me here,   |
| 4142 | And fill me from the crown to the toe top-full   |
| 43              | Of direst cruelty! make thick my blood;  |
|                 | Stop up the access and passage to remorse,   |
| 44              | That no compunctious visitings of nature   |
| 4546        | Shake my fell purpose, nor keep peace between  |
| 47              | The effect and it! Come to my woman's breasts,   |
| 48              | And take my milk for gall, you murd'ring ministers,  |
| 49              | Wherever in your sightless substances  |
| 50              | You wait on nature's mischief! Come, thick night,  |
| 51 -            | And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,  |
| 52              | That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,   |
| 53              | Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,   |
| 54              | To cry "Hold, hold!"   |

|                 | LADY MACBETH   |
| 35              | Out, damned spot! out, I say!—One: two: why,   |
| 36              | then, 'tis time to do't.—Hell is murky!—Fie, my  |
| 37              | lord, fie! a soldier, and afeard? What need we   |
| 38              | fear who knows it, when none can call our power  |
| 39              | to account?-Yet who would have thought the old   |
| 40              | man to have had so much blood in him?  |
| 40              | man to make a second   |
|                 | Doctor   |
|                 | Do you mark that?  |
| 41              | Do you mark mat:   |
|                 | I ADV MACDETH  |
|                 | LADY MACBETH   |
| 42              | The thane of Fife had a wife; where is she now?—   |
| 43              | What, will these hands ne'er be clean?—No more o   |
| 44              | that, my lord, no more o' that: you mar all with   |
